GRUMPY THE SCULPTOR

Up on the fluffy white clouds of Care-a-Lot, something very strange was taking place.

"Humph! Hold still, Love-a-Lot! Stop wobbling!"

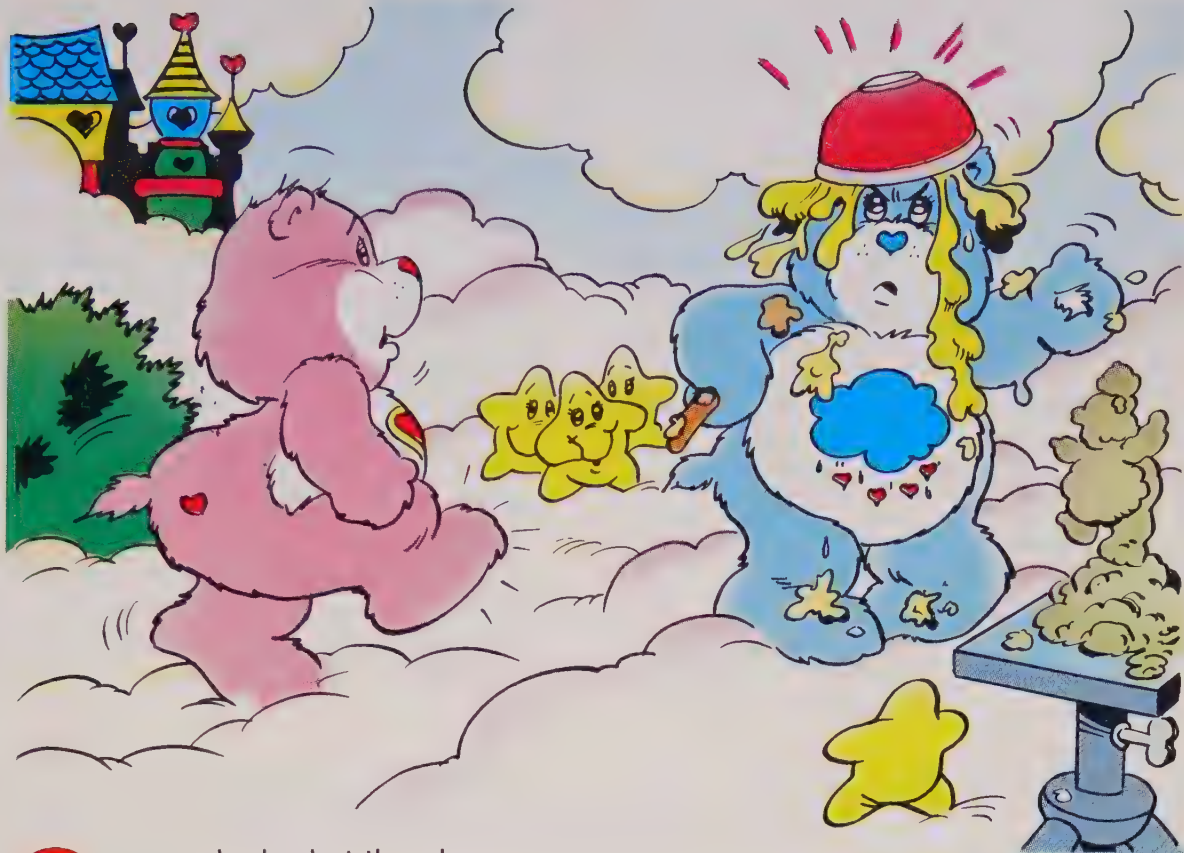

"I can't help it, Grumpy," groaned Love-a-Lot. She was standing on one foot, her arms outstretched, with a bowl of lemon jelly balanced on the end of her nose. "My tootsies have gone to sleep!"

Grumpy sighed his deepest sigh, and flicked a lump of wet clay off his fingers. "Tch! How am I supposed to create my masterpiece of modern sculpture when my model keeps making such a fuss!" he muttered, crossly.

"You've only been standing there for three and a half hours! Next thing I know, you'll be wanting to have a tea-break!"

"Well," said Love-a-Lot, smiling wistfully. "That would be nice!"

Grumpy looked at the clay sculpture on his table, and shook his head in dismay.

"At this rate, I'll never be finished," he complained, poking his sculpture with his spatula. "Look at it! The head's lop-sided, and somehow you've got an extra leg coming out of your ear!"

"Have I?" gasped Love-a-Lot, worriedly, trying to look around to the side of her head to see how her ear could have grown an extra foot. "Heavens to fuzzies! I'd better ask Grams for some ointment!"

"Not you!" shouted Grumpy, feeling very frustrated. "I mean, the model of you! Now stop moving!"

But it was too late! Love-a-Lot's foot had gone to sleep. "Oooh! I've got the tinglies!" she wailed, hopping up and down to try and waken her foot up again. As she hopped, the bowl of jelly bounced off her nose, did a perfect three-point somersault through the air, and landed on Grumpy's head with a horrible, squelchy Splaaaaat!

"Why do I bother?" Grumpy asked, to no one in particular, as a lump of jelly slipped down his nose and plopped on to his foot. "Why do I bother?!!"

On earth, a little girl named Emma was also having problems with her modelling.

"Ha-ha! That's rubbish!" teased Steven, who sat next to her in class. "Your plasticine model of a cat looks like a rhinoceros on a diet!"

"Don't be rude, Steven," said Miss Witt, their school teacher, trying not to smile at Emma's funny-looking model. "I'm sure Emma's trying her best!"

But Emma had had enough. "I'm hopeless!" she sulked in the playground, at break-time. "I'll never be any good sculpting models! It's not fair!" When no one was looking, she sneaked out of the school entrance and down the road.

"I'm running away for ever," she decided. "Then no one can laugh at me again!"

Grumpy was standing outside the Hall of Hearts, his thumb wiggling about inside his left ear, trying to dislodge the jelly that had got stuck inside it, when he heard a loud ringing echoing around him.

"Oh, wonderful!" he moaned, as a little black raincloud floated up from his tummy symbol to hover over his head, just to show how fed-up he was. "Now I'm going mad from all the stress of being a famous sculptor. I can hear ringing in my ears!"

"You are silly, Grumpy!" giggled Cheer Bear, sliding down next to him from one of her sparkling, colourful rainbows. "That's not your ears ringing! It's the Caring Meter!"

Grumpy turned to watch the dial on the Caring Meter droop from Happy to Sad, its red hearts flashing to warn of trouble.

"And it means that someone is in need of urgent love and caring!" cried Friend.

"It's Emma, a little girl on earth," explained Funshine, who had been keeping watch through the star-scope. "She's upset because she can't sculpture models!"

Grumpy's raincloud vanished at the news, and, if anyone had looked closely, they might have seen the tiniest smile creep on to his face.

"Fuzzies!" he said, leaping into the cloudmobile, and heading down to earth. "I'm just the Care Bear to help her! I'm an expert at sculpture!"

"Now this is how you shape the head," explained Grumpy, who had been sitting with Emma in the park for the past half hour. He stuck his hand in the squishy, gooey wet mud that he had created with the help of his raincloud. "And then you take a bigger lump and squeeze it all round to make the body."

Emma had not enjoyed herself so much in ages. Both she and Grumpy were both covered in mud where Grumpy had been teaching her how to sculpture models. Of course, his models never looked like they were supposed to, but she didn't have the heart to tell that to the kind-hearted, if sour-faced bear!

"Thanks for helping me, Grumpy," she said, after they had stood under a rain-shower to wash away the mud. "I'm sure I can do better, now."

Grumpy almost smiled - again! - but thought twice about it. Smiling made his face ache and that put him a bad mood!

"Fuzzies! It was my pleasure, I suppose," he muttered, trying to sound miserable. "But you were very silly to run away from school, Emma. What if something had happened to you? You could have had an accident, or got lost, and no one would know where to find you."

"I'm sorry," said Emma, as Grumpy returned them to school in the cloud-mobile. "I'll promise I'll never do that again! You've taught me that if I keep practising - and don't give up - I'll get better at anything I try to do!"

In the classroom, Emma apologised to her teacher for running away. Then she joined the other children, who were busy working on their models. When the lesson ended, Emma was given a gold star for her effort!

"It's wonderful, Emma," said Miss Witt, delightedly. "You've become so much better!"

Outside, Grumpy was watching through the window. He whispered 'Care Bears Stare!' and a stream of magical hearts flew out from his tummy symbol and into the classroom. The hearts surrounded Emma's cat model, and to everyone's surprise, it began to dance!

"Tee-hee! How clever!" giggled Emma, who winked at Grumpy. She knew he had somehow brought it to life.

"I must be seeing things!" gasped Miss Witt, staggering out of the room. "I think I need to have a lie-down!"

Grumpy giggled. He liked a good joke!

Back in Care-a-Lot, Grumpy tried to finish his sculpture of Love-a-Lot.

"Now stand still!" he muttered to his model, who was doing her balancing act again. He stepped back to get a better view... and tripped over the edge of the clay-trough he was keeping his wet clay in.

"Waaah!" he cried, landing with a loud Splaaaat! in the trough.

"Heh! You do look funny, Grumpy!" giggled Love-a-Lot, helping him out again. He was covered from head-to-foot in thick, fast-setting clay!

"Fuzzies! It's dried already!" he gasped. "I can't move!"

Tenderheart came along. "Cool! What a brilliant sculpture, Love-a-Lot!" he said, admiring the clay-covered Grumpy. "It looks just like Grumpy Bear!"

"Humph! It is me!" wailed Grumpy, but Tenderheart had already walked off.

"I've had enough sculpting," groaned Grumpy, as Love-a-Lot started to chip away the clay to free him. "I think I'll take up knitting instead!"

WENDY'S HOUSE

(A report by Funshine Bear)

Hello, readers. Funshine Bear here! Hugs and Tugs are impatient to become true Care Bears. So when they discovered that a little girl was afraid of her toys they tried to use their Care Bear magic to help make things right! But only being cubs themselves, they got it all wrong! Let me tell you the story from the very beginning...

Care-a-Lot, as usual, was full of warmth and cheerfulness. It was also empty of Care Bears, for we were busy on earth, bringing love and caring to children.

Snugglies! I mean almost empty, for Grams was there, baby-sitting Hugs and Tugs, who were tucked up in their beds in the Hall of Hearts.

But when they heard the alarm ringing from the Caring Meter, the mischievous scamps leapt up, and went to see what all the trouble was about.

"Ooooh! It's Wendy Orchard, of Arnold Road," gasped Hugs, reading the message from the teleprinter. "Heavens to fuzzies! Can you believe it, Tugs? She can't get to sleep because she's afraid of her toys!"

"Come on, Hugs!" shouted Tugs, leaping onto a passing rainbow and sliding all the way down to earth. "Let's go and help her! The others will be so proud of us, they might make us official Care Bears!"

Wendy was sitting up in her bed, her covers pulled up over her head.

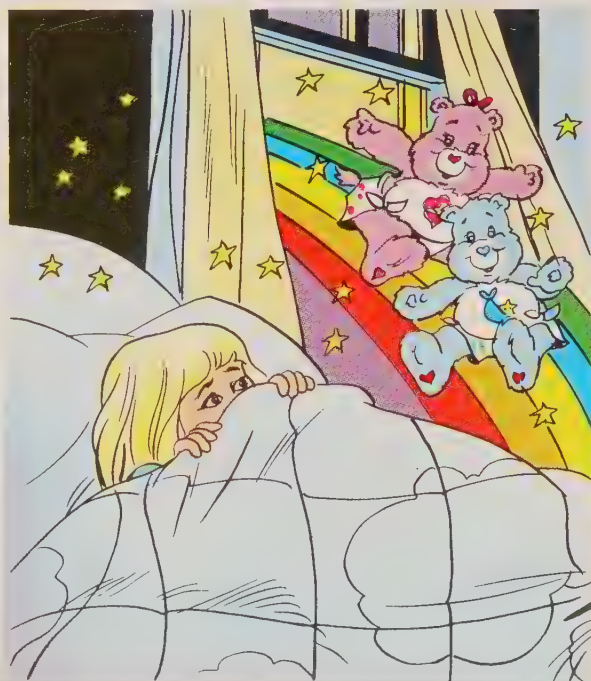

"Tee-hee! Are you playing 'Hide-n-Seek?'" giggled Tugs, as he and Hugs slipped off the end of the rainbow and into her room.

"Because, if you are, I can see you!"

"No, I'm not!" snapped Wendy, poking her head free. "I'm hiding from my toys in case they come and get me!"

Hugs was very puzzled. As far as she could see, there were no toys in the room!

"They're all outside in the garden, in my wendy house," explained Wendy. "And I'm sure I can hear them moving about, calling to me!"

Hugs and Tugs listened, very carefully. Then they both laughed. "You are a silly-billy!" chuckled Hugs. "That's only the sound of the wind, and the branches of a tree rattling against your window!"

But Wendy wasn't convinced. So Hugs and Tugs whistled up a small cloud and floated Wendy out into the garden to see for herself.

"Oooh! It's very spooky!" she gasped, standing at the door of the wendy house, in the dark. "Haven't you got a torch or something?"

"We've got better than that!" chuckled Tugs, opening the door and entering the small, wooden house. "We've got our Care Bears Stare!"

And with that, as the two cubs said their magic phrase, a brilliant, warm light appeared from their tummy symbols. It spread all around the wendy house, bathing the toys - and there were lots of them! - in colourful magic.

"See? I told you your toys weren't alive!" said Tugs, pointing at the toys laying in a heap on the floor.

"Well, we weren't!" said a gruff voice. "But we are now!"

Hugs and Tugs fell back in amazement as Wendy's toys sprang to their feet - and grew in size! There were dolls and furry animals, whirling spinning tops, twirling skipping ropes and a jack-in-the-box who bounced out of his box on a spring! To the left appeared a rocking horse, to the right a dancing hippopotamus in top hat and tails!

"Heavens to fuzzies!" wailed Hugs. "We've done it again, Tugs! We've mixed up our magic and brought Wendy's toys to life!"

"Wheeee! This is fun!" chuckled Wendy, who sat aboard the now giant spinning top as it burst out of the door of the wendy house and went whizzing around the garden.

The other toys quickly squeezed through the door and windows, before they grew too big to escape.

"Come back!" shouted Tugs, giving chase. "We'll get in trouble if someone sees you!"

He caught hold of the jack-in-the-box, and then found himself springing up and down in the air!

"Ouch! Owwch! Yeeeps!" he cried, banging his head on the branch of a tree every time the jack-in-the box bounced.

Hugs had tried to capture the dancing hippopotamus, but he had grown so big he picked her up and swung her around by her arms as he twirled a pirouette!

"W-w-wuzzlies! I'm getting d-d-dizzy!" she squealed, before the hippo let go and she landed with a bump on the ground!

Wendy was too busy enjoying herself to notice Hugs and Tugs in trouble. With the aid of the skipping rope, which was now magically twirling around and around, she was skipping up and down alongside two china dolls and a one-eared teddy bear!

"Wendy!" hissed Tugs, trying to be as quiet as possible. "We have to get your toys back into your wendy house before your parents wake up! They won't be very pleased to catch you playing in the garden at this time of night!"

He tried to catch hold of one end of the skipping rope to stop it from moving. "Waaaaah!" he cried, as the rope twizzled around him until he was all tied up!

And when Hugs went to rescue him, she got tangled in a set of spinning hula hoops!

"Oh, fuzzies!" she sighed, watching the toys dancing in a circle. "I wish the Care Bears were here!"

"Funny you should say that," I chuckled, swooping down in a cloud-mobile, followed by all my friends. "We've just returned from Care-a-Lot and found you missing! And Grams is not very happy, I can tell you!"

"We were only trying to help Wendy!" groaned Tugs, as I quickly created a pair of rainbow scissors to cut him free from the skipping rope.

"And it was kind of you to be so caring," said Tenderheart, helping Good Luck to pull Hugs out from the hula hoops. "But you should have waited for us! It takes a long time to learn how to use Care Bear magic properly."

The Care Bears joined paws and shouted, "Care Bears Stare!"

With a loud Whoooooossh! a colourful wind of hearts and stars surround the toys, returning them to their true size and sweeping them back into the wendy house!

"Phew! They're not alive anymore!" cheered Tugs. He looked ashamed. "I'm sorry we caused so much trouble!"

"Not to worry," chuckled Champ. "Everyone makes mistakes - and you made a champion effort to help Wendy!"

Wendy put her arms around Hugs and Tugs. "You were wonderful," she said. "I haven't had so much fun in ages! And I'll never be scared of my toys again!"

After Bedtime had put Wendy to bed, the Care Bears returned to Care-a-Lot. Grams was waiting with a surprise for the cubs.

"You were very naughty to go off like that," she scolded them lightly. "But you did it for a good cause, so I think you both deserve a present!"

Inside the parcels were a skipping rope and a hula hoop! Hugs and Tugs groaned!

"Thanks, Grams," sighed Tugs. "But we've gone right off toys - at least for a little while!"

Lots of snuggly love

Grumpy Bear (Cloud)

Bedtime Bear (Moon)

Grams Bear (Rose)

Bedtime Bear always wishes children 'Sweet dreams' before they fall to sleep. But thanks to that rotten scoundrel, Professor Coldheart, all they faced were...

Night was falling on Care-a-Lot. The sun closed its tired eyes and the happy, sparkling stars danced across the evening sky.

"Fuzzies! Hurry up, Bedtime!" said Harmony, shaking her dozing friend. "It's almost bedtime! Time to go to work! You're late!"

Bedtime yawned, stretched, and slowly clambered out of his nice, warm bed. "Ho-hum!" he sighed, first opening one eye and then the other. "I was having such a... yawn!... lovely dream!"

"Well, you can go back to it in the morning," chuckled Tenderheart, appearing in Bedtime's bedroom.

"Now you have to check on the dreams of all our dear friends. We don't want them having nightmares, do we?"

It was Bedtime's job to make sure that all the children on earth had a peaceful sleep, so they would be wide awake in the morning. Bedtime loved caring for children's dreams - they were so much fun to watch. A little girl may dream of being a wonderful ballerina. For a little boy, it might be a dream of eating a mountain of ice cream! Bedtime toddled along to his Dream Machine, which was kept in the basement of the Hall of Hearts. The Dream Machine allowed him to watch all the dreams that took place, every night.

"That's odd!" he said, staring at the blank screen. "Where are the pictures? There's something very unsnuggly about this!"

By the time Champ popped in to see how his friend was doing, Bedtime had re-examined the Dream Machine five times, and had come to a terrible conclusion.

"Heavens to fuzzies!" he cried. "There are no dreams! All the children have stopped dreaming!"

"Oh, no!" groaned Love-a-Lot, when she heard the news. "That means there are no sweet dreams to keep the children's hearts full of love and caring! They'll wake up being nasty and rotten and uncaring!"

Bedtime knew what they had to do. "We'll have to enter the Land of Dreams and find out what's gone wrong!" he said, sprinkling his friends and himself with sleepy dust to send them into a deep sleep. "Otherwise... yawn!... the children... yawn!... will never dream again! Zzzzzzz!"

The Care Bears found themselves in the Land of Dreams, and wished they hadn't.

"Snugglies! What's happened?" gasped Wish Bear, on her arrival. "This should be a wonderful, happy place, full of sunshine and colour..."

"And now it's covered in ice!" wailed Cheer. "It's not cheerful at all!"

"Humph! I wish you had warned me!" muttered Grumpy, blowing on his paws to keep them warm. "Then I would have jolly well worn a coat... two coats...even three coats! Brrr!"

The Land of Dreams had indeed changed for the worse.

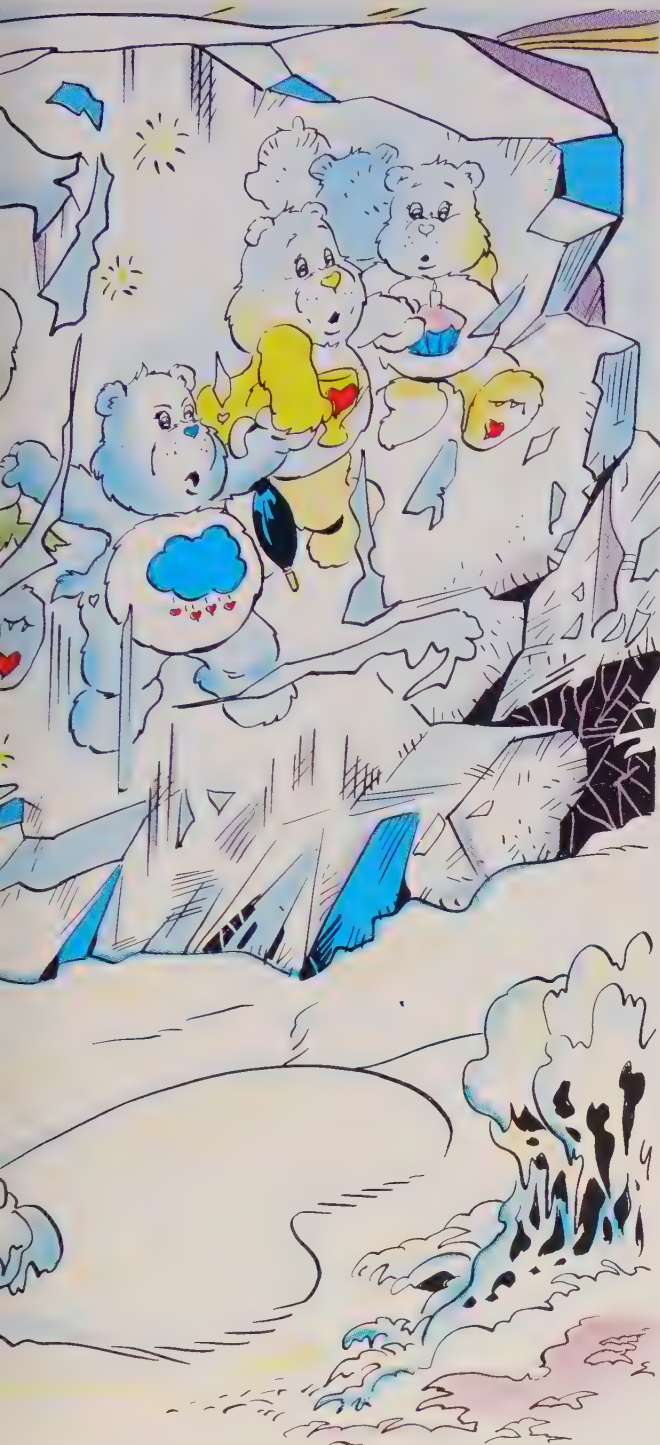

Everywhere the Care Bears looked, the landscape was covered in a layer of thick ice. It was so cold the falling petals from the colourful rainbow trees had frozen in mid-air!

"I know of only one person who would do such a terrible thing!" said Friend. "The most unfriendly person in the world..."

"Professor Coldheart!" chorused all the Care Bears together.

"Did someone call my name?" cackled a chilly voice. Before the Care Bears could act, up popped the icy villain from behind a frozen bush.

"Isn't it wonderful!" he hissed, hopping about with glee. "I've made it so cold and uncaring! The perfect place for a cold-hearted person like me! That's why, when I appeared here in my dreams, I had it frozen with the aid of this super-powered Freeze Machine I dreamed up!"

He twirled on one foot across to a giant machine that stood on a golden river of ice.

"But why?" spluttered Bedtime. "Why freeze the dreams of children? It's so... nasty!"

"Heh-heh! Why, thank you, my fuzzy fool!" cackled Coldheart. "That's what I thought, too! And I love being nasty! With all their dreams frozen, the children will wake up with cold, uncaring hearts - and I will be able to turn them all into my mindless slaves, the Green Meanies! Ha-ha!"

"Not if we stop you first!" challenged a determined Funshine. Her sunny tummy symbol glowed, creating a beam of sunlight that shone forth across the ice. "My sunshine powers will melt all your ice away!"

Unfortunately, the air was so cold, the sunshine beam froze before it reached the ground!

"Yikes!" gasped Funshine in dismay. "It's so cold it's affecting my magic powers!"

"Heh! That's because the children's hearts are already freezing over!" laughed Coldheart. "And without their love and caring, your powers will disappear!"

"We're not beaten yet, Professor Coldheart!" shouted Tenderheart. "We'll combine all our power in a Care Bears Stare! Not even you will be able to fight that!"

The Care Bears joined paws... but it was too late! Coldheart switched on his Freeze Machine and a blue beam encircled the Bears, freezing them in a solid block of ice!

"You can't fight me when you're frozen!" he cheered. "And soon all the caring in the world will be gone forever! At last... I've won!"

"Oooh! F-fuzzies!" wailed Love-a-Lot. "It's so c-c-cold! I can feel my powers draining a-a-already!"

"All is not yet l-l-lost!" whispered Bedtime, who was trying hard to stop his teeth from chattering. "This is the Land of D-Dreams! What we have to do, is d-d-dream up s-something that will get us out of h-h-here!"

The Care Bears quickly decided what they should dream up. They closed their eyes, and daydreamed, very hard!

"What's happening?" cried Coldheart, as something took form before him. "There shouldn't be any dreams - I've frozen them all!"

What appeared made Coldheart leap out of his socks in fright! It was a huge, monstrous fire-breathing dragon!

"Grrroooooaaar!" roared the dragon, so loud that the ground shook and Coldheart fell over with a bump!

"Hurray! It's working!" cheered Good Luck. "Our dream has come true!"

With one mighty step, the dragon flattened Coldheart's Freeze Machine beneath one of its enormous feet! Krruuunnch! Then the dragon took a deep breath and blew a ball of flame at the ice that trapped the Care Bears! Whooooossssh!

"Yippee! We're free!" shouted Secret, as the ice turned into a big bundle of puddle water. "Quickly, Care Bears! Join paws before it is too late!"

The Care Bears stood in a circle and shouted, "Care Bears Stare!" All the love and caring in their hearts burst free from their tummy symbols, spreading out across the Land of Dreams, melting all the ice and bringing the world back to life!

"Waaah! It's not fair!" screamed Coldheart, having one of his tantrums. "Those rotten fuzzy pests have ruined my schemes again!"

He was so angry, he kicked the dragon on the bottom - which was rather a silly mistake! With a loud Grrroooooaar! the dragon chased after Coldheart, all over the Land of Dreams.

The Care Bears woke up and they were back safely in the Hall of Hearts.

"It's worked!" chuckled a happy Bedtime, after checking his Dream Machine. "All the children are dreaming again - and what happy dreams they are!"

So if you have a dream tonight, and you happen to meet the Care Bears - and you just might! - remember to thank them for saving your dreams!

PARTY TIME WITH

JELLY FRIENDS!

You will need:

A big bowl of jelly

2 spoons

2 blind folds

Blind fold two friends and sit them opposite each other with the bowl of jelly between them. Watch them try to feed it to each other! Tee-hee! This game is really funny...and messy! It might be a good idea to sit your friends on some old newspapers before beginning this game!!

CAPTAIN FUNNYFACE!

You can play this game with as many friends as you wish! First, everyone must sit in a circle and choose a captain. Then the captain turns to the person on his or her right and pulls a face, pokes out a tongue, waggles fingers in their ears or does something very silly! The person on the captain's right does the same to the next person on their right hand side and so on around the circle and back to the captain. Each time around, the captain changes the action. The aim is not to giggle and each player who laughs goes out until the next game. The winner is the player who has kept a straight face right throughout the game! Tee-hee! Grumpy Bear normally wins this game!!

FUNSHINE BEAR!

PEBBLY DANCING!

You will need:
5 or 6 friends
1 small pebble
Music

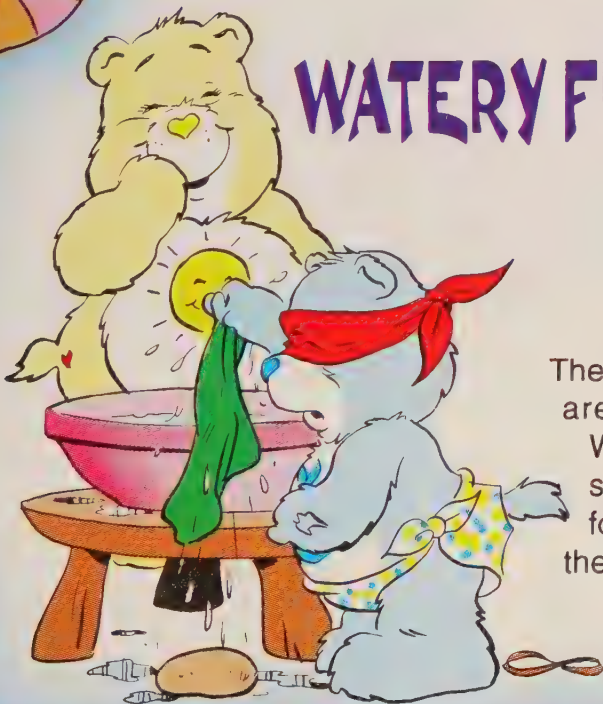

First choose one of your friends to send out of the room. Then choose a second player to put a pebble in his or her shoe. Now you can ask the first player to return. Turn on some music and everyone dance, pretending to have the pebble in their shoe! The first player must guess who really has got the pebble! By the way, this is one of Harmony Bear's favourite games!

WATERY FUN!

You will need:
A blind fold
A bowl or bucket
Different objects to put in the bowl.eg. A potato, rubber band, comb, sock, etc.

The aim in this game is to guess what objects are hidden in the water by feeling them. When you decide which objects to use, submerge them in the water. Next, blind fold one of your friends at a time and lead them to the bowl. The winner is the person who guesses the most correct in 30 seconds! Tee-hee! You'll like this one!
